Preaching a Practical Sermon.

A number of years ago, Parson B- - preached a town in this State. A sound thealogician was arson B--- as a published volume of his sermons ice; but like many clergymen of the past generm he was too much given to preaching "doctrinsermons," to the exclusion of "practical" themes: least so thought one of his parishoners. One was inclined dulge in creature comforts: another was a tere man at a bargain, and so on.

While in mid-volley, the door of the church openand Dr S entered.

EARLY MARRIAGE.—At a recent election in San ma, Texas, a Mexican "boy" attempted to vote, from his youthful appearance his vote was chalged, and it was proven on oath that he was but ben years of age The Ledger says that he has e and a child one year old, and for the sake of lying curiosity, the editor of that paper was led sult a physician on the subject, and was as-

Lighten the Boat. Shake hands, pledge hearts, bid fond adieus, Speak with your brimming eyes; To-morrow—and the dark deep sea Will echo with your sighs.

To-morrow-and you stately ship Will bear to other lands The kindred whom ye love so well ! Breathe hopes, pledge hearts, shake hands! The Fairy Queen stands out to sea,

Breasting the pearly laughing waves With high and gallant head. Her freight consists of human souls : Her destiny, a land Where scarce a human foot has trod

And not a living tomb.

Each stitch of canvas spread,

Upon the forest strand. Five hundred souls she bears away, To find a distant home Where toil will give them daily bread,

The ship speeds on; her sanguine freight, A motley little world, Reveling in the thousand scenes By future hopes unfurled.

She creeps along 'mid cloudless calms. Or dashes through the black, Till cheerless days and nights and weeks, And weary months are passed. At length the Captain shouts, "Stand by!"

The boatswain sounds his call; "Trice up the yards and clear the decks Secure against the squall." Shipwreek and death! The doom is sealed, A bolt has riven the mast;

The ship shall brave the blast ?" Pallor is on the strong man's cheek. Woe in the mother's heart. For round her throb those kindred ties No power but death shall part.

We will not die-we must be saved,

A rending peal, a shuddering crash, A wail of agony; The shattered bark, with many a soul, Sinks headlong in the sea.

Morning breaks o'er the world of waves, But finds no Fairy Queen. One single, tiny boat is all To tell that she has been.

A crowded remnant of the wreck With naked life escape, No land for twenty-souls-all sen, Relentless, vast, ngape.

Lighten the boat ! or every soul

Will perish suddenly; Inquiring eyes and throbbing hearts Ask all, "Will it be I ?" A boy sits silent in the bows.

Bereft of earthly ties; He must be told : " Sav, friendless boy, Are you afraid to die?" Why should I die? My father's de ad, Mother and sister too;

But live or die with you." He pleads in vain. "A moment then, A moment longer spare !" With fervent heart and lifted eyes,

O! let me not be drowned alone.

He lightly steps upon the prow,

He breathes his simple prayer. Awe, deep and silent, struck each heart As on that trembling tongue. "Father in Heaven thy will be done?"

And, gathering up his strength, Unblenched scans his yawning grave, To feel its depth and length. Who seals the doom? No hand is raised, None hear the spirit knell; A sudden plunge, a thrilling cry,

Breaks in upon the spell. They search the boat, they search the sea; The noble boy is gone, Gone, let us hope, where angels are, Self-martyred and alone
